WE NOMINATE

Winfield William Riefler, one of the world's outstanding authorities in the realm of international economic relations and since 1935 professor of economics at the Institute for Advance Study, who, with other far-seeing men, has helped pave the way to the current Geneva Conference that is wrestling with the formation of an International Trade Organization. As the spokesmen of 18 nations gather at conference-tables, it is the hope of the economic and technical advisers of the Department of State that they will be able to evolve a non-political world trade program which would contribute immeasurably to dissipating the prevailing international atmosphere of confusion, mistrust and fear.

Although the contemplated I.T.O. has been described by its most vociferous critics as an effort to create a "colossal superstate," Riefler's approach to the problems of world trade is essentially the same as the economic point of view embodied in Cordell Hull's pioneering reciprocal trade agreements. Pointing out that this country's tariff policies have frequently been "completely unrealistic," Riefler feels that the United States by positive action must assure other countries that the American economy is not headed toward a price-boom bust and must recognize that the revision of United States tariffs is necessary.

Riefler, a 50-year old native of Buffalo, N.Y., for the past 25 years has not only been propounding economic theory but has also been translating theory into accomplished fact. Ever since completing his undergraduate studies at Amherst in 1921, a student career that including winning the Croix de Guerre with the A.E.F., he has been closely affiliated with governmental agencies. After two years in Argentina as a Foreign Trade Officer, he was tapped by the Federal Reserve Board, becoming, in turn, a member of its division of research and statistics, executive secretary to the committee on bank reserves, economic adviser to the executive council and chairman of the central statistical board.

With the dawn of the Rooseveltian era, he was drawn into the inner circles of the New Deal, joining what amounted to a "Super Cabinet" and advising the National Emergency Council. His dramatic role in World War II as Minister to England, charged with the direction of economic warfare against Festung Europa, was preceded by years of devoted service to various League of Nations commissions.

For tempering economic theory and "idealism" with a profoundly realistic understanding of the chaotic world situation; for making it possible for others to see why this nation must seek "an expanding, cooperative multi-lateral world economy;" he is TOWN TOPICS' candidate for

Topics of the Town

Election over in April? Four short days before the deadline for filing on the June primary ballot, it looked as if the slate the Republicans named last week was virtually elected by default. Unable to persuade the men they felt best suited for the jobs to run for office, the Democrats announced officially "no opposition."

Even if candidates did appear to contest apparent G.O.P. supremacy (there were brief opportunities left now and immediately after the June primaries), the mounting difficulty in obtaining men and women to run for public office here was sure to be a topic of conversation in weeks to come. Versions would vary—increasingly complex responsibilities, innumerable meetings, the acute growing pains of the community, the minute ($500) mayoralty salary and none for the councilmen—but conclusions would be identical: if the nation flourishes on the two-party system, Princeton in the long run must expect to do likewise.

Mayor Minot C. Morgan, Jr., told TOWN TOPICS this week that in fairness to his job and his family, he was not planning to seek reelection. The decision was understandable from any busy man, let alone one who had put in a term as chief executive of this seething town.

Democrats worked long and hard to build a strong slate around Christian

DO YOU HAVE PROOF FOR YOUR INCOME TAX DEDUCTIONS?

At income tax time a checking account gives ample evidence of its value, because—

- 1—There is no better proof for income tax deductions than a cancelled check.
- 2—Check stubs provide easy-to-find records of all legitimate deductions (and overlooked or forgotten deductions can cost you money these days).

A checking account is equally valuable throughout the rest of the year. If you don't have one now, why not use your next paycheck to open one at the Calcinators or "Calcinator Sam, The Garbage Disposal Man." The latter quote is for purposes of saving us a definition and allowing us to launch immediately into the labor and, eventually, money-saving advantages of this world-of-the-future wonder now with us.

The Calcinator is a moderate-sized, white enamel unit, handily fitted into any kitchen, which can digest almost anything but bottles and cans. Most economically operated on gas, it disposes of the refuse or garbage which can be deposited several times daily, leaving only a fine ash in a grate on the bottom. The grate needs infrequent emptying, and contributes in its own way to your convenience by providing a workless, free fertilizer for your garden. The Calcinator, at $122.95, is an investment; but considering every angle, from the saving of trouble and annoyance to the possible prevention of such extreme unpleasantness as the rats which result from sloppy outside garbage disposal, it is well worth it. At the Nassau Appliance Company, 252 Nassau Street.

Electro-Aire. Another somewhat mystifying trade name; another easily explained and, once you own one, an indispensable household addition. This one is an electric ozonator, which in simple terms means a device that which purifies and "unodorizes" the air by dispelling ozone through it.

Resembling a tiny radio, the Electro-Aire needs only to be plugged in to start its good work. Kitchen, bathroom, sickroom, post-party living room—all can benefit, and often. It's $19.95, but far more effective than its bottled counterparts and will long outlast the bottled results of that much cash in-

Gauss, who retired last June after splendid service as Princeton's Dean of the College. But Dean Gauss, recently named national Phi Beta Kappa president, a position which will involve considerable traveling on his part, and looking forward to pleasant hours of writing, declined to run for mayor.

His regretful comment telephoned from the South: "I can think of no greater honor my fellow Princetonians could confer upon me than to consider me for this position." Had Dean Gauss, backed by a life-long record as an able administrator and liked and admired as are few other members of the community, seen his way clear to run, the best political race in the town's 130-odd years would have been the result.

Miscellany. The town went back to horse and buggy days when the 'phone strike started this week, but with emergency calls cheerfully handled by company officials, housewives and those stores depending on orders called in were chiefly inconvenienced . . . a Trenton taxi driver brought a passenger to Princeton about midnight Saturday, had a gun stuck in his ribs at the end of the ride on Clay Street, watched $35 and two rings he was wearing vanish into the night.

News of the Theatres

The Playhouse

Pursued (Fri., Sat.) tells of a two-family feud that lasts a near life-time but never does manage to generate much interest. Robert Mitchum and Teresa Wright in a New Mexico setting.

My Favorite Brunette (Sun. thru Wed.) is Bob Hope's latest, and one of his best. He and Dorothy Lamour whirl joyfully through a fast-moving whodunit in which Mr. Hope, framed for murder, becomes entangled in a convention of private detectives. Good and funny.

I'll Be Yours (Thurs., Fri., Sat.) gives its star, Deanna Durbin, but three brief songs to sing, spends most of its time juggling a boring plot about a country girl trying to make a name in a big city. Save for the musical moments, it's distinctly disappointing.

The Garden

The Return of Monte Cristo (Fri., Sat.) Features Louis Hayward and Barbara Britton in a routine adventure film based on a lost fortune and the escape of the hero from Devil's Island to even the score with his enemies.

Mr. District Attorney (Mon., Tues., Wed.) sets a brisk pace as heroine Marguerite Chapman commits five separate murders in a desperate effort to keep up interest in the film. She bungles her last attempt, but the plot dies a natural death long before that.

Tarzan and the Huntress (Thurs., Fri., Sat.) sends Johnny Weissmuller into the jungles to protect his animal friends against a band of hunters intent on carrying them back to the zoo. A sure hit for the Saturday matinee trade.

Post war, sheer, elastic hosiery like Nylon. Light weight, comfortable. All sizes in stock. Thorne the Druggist.

Caruso of the Tailor Made Woman at 120 Nassau Street, is a really superb tailor. You can confirm this for yourself by taking a look at some of the ladies' suits which he has made to order—we were thoroughly impressed when we wrote them up; we were even more so after viewing his latest creations. Now we have persuaded Mr. Caruso to turn his talents upon request to making slacks: custom-made to fit and suit each individual wearer.

The materials which he has are lovely. We were particularly struck by the possibilities of two of them: an oxford gray flannel with a delicate pin stripe of dark red, and a gray and red checked light wool, both a far and distinctive cry from the usual gray flannel. There are also various attractive shades in gabardine; and if you don't happen to find what you want right in the shop, you can go through a large book of samples, and it's bound to be there.

One last word—if you wear slacks as you wear blue jeans, don't bother with The Tailor Made Woman for them. But if you care how you look in them—lines, material, etc.—and if you want them good looking enough to wear during at-home evenings as a veritable "costume," there is your spot.

YOU will find on the back page of this week's TOWN TOPICS a very handy FIRST AID CARD. We suggest you save it and fasten it near your telephone or paste it onto your phone book—Thorne the Druggist.
